

FINDING YOUR TRANS STYLE

As trans and non-binary folk, it can be hard to know where to start when we're exploring new looks and styles when we first come out! Here are some prompts to help find your way to what makes you feel like you!

What colours, textures, or shapes make you feel happy?

Do you like fabrics that move and flow? Do you like more structure?

Is there anyone whose style you love? They could be a celebrity, someone you admire, or a character you identify with.

What shapes or silhouettes do you want to project?

Do you have any accessories that make you feel gender euphoria?

Follow your joy!

TIPS AND ADVICE

Know your measurements!
Clothing sizes vary between shops, styles, and the gender they are marketed towards. Knowing your measurements lets you find the right fit for you!

Customise! Stencils, fabric paint, and fabric pens are easy places to start. There are lots of great resources online to learn basic sewing techniques; learning with friends can help! Look for local clothes-swaps, kilo sales, and charity shops!

Accessorise! Even small additions to an outfit can let you express something of yourself. Earrings and jewellery, a tie, belts, can all change the overall tone of an outfit to be more feminine, masculine, or androgynous.

Shapewear can give a more feminine outline; correctly sized binders can flatten your chest. Be careful to wear binders safely - be mindful in hot weather, and don't wear them for overly long periods of time.

Proportionise! Rouched fabric creates volume; a deep neckline draws the eye away from broad shoulders; a structured jacket and straight leg will help to create a more angular silhouette.

Trans and non-binary specific events, as well as Pride, are a great place to safely try out new styles!
